SPLICING NUT

There are those who can make an eye splice in braided line in double-quick time, but there are many more who can't. I number myself among the latter group, which is why I like the Splicing Nut. This two-piece device made of glass-reinforced nylon forms a loop in braided line in, well, double-quick time. Used as, say, a halyard termination, it makes for a neater appearance than a knot—and, it won't compromise the strength of the line as much as a knot. Suitable for line sizes $\frac{3}{16}$ -inch to $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch; from \$12.92 for two $\frac{3}{16}$ -inch nuts.
